The guide also includes a comprehensive list of definitions for equipment and tools used in stringing and for stringing terms commonly employed. This guide does not address special conductors such as those used for river and canyon crossing. These conductors may be custom designed and often may require special considerations.

Higher voltage transmission lines typically reclose on high speed, voltage check, and/or synchronism check. Lower voltage transmission systems may have two or three blind shots from either end of the line. Details of various features that may accompany automatic reclosing schemes are beyond the scope of this guide (see IEEE PSRC Report [B1]).
